

Financial Services Regulatory Consulting

Resolve the past, respond to lessons learnt and secure the future

Our Financial Services Regulatory Consulting team offers a fresh approach to solving regulatory challenges, drawing on deep legal insight, extensive sector expertise and the knowledge of experienced regulatory consultants. Increasingly complex regulatory requirements combined with operational challenges means that firms often feel the need to turn to multiple advisers for help. Our Financial Services Regulatory Consulting team works alongside our market-leading legal colleagues to support you from advice to implementation. We can support you in the following ways.

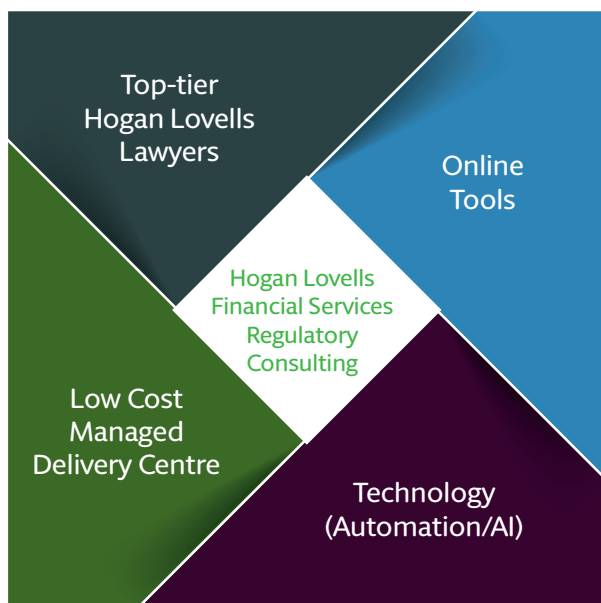

We work with clients to resolve historic issues as well as to establish and develop new businesses and innovative products. This means that our work future proofing businesses is informed by experience of past mistakes and that we approach any review of past business with fresh eyes.

How we do things differently

The costs and operational challenges of addressing regulatory issues and changes along with the focus on innovation and efficiency means that our clients are always looking at new ways of doing things. So are we.

For each project we build a bespoke approach. Our regulatory consultants bring a unique perspective borne from time spent at the regulator, FOS and in-house at fast-paced start-ups and major financial institutions. We work with sector specific Hogan Lovells lawyers and bring efficiency to any project through the use of our alternative delivery centre, automated tools and online services. This capability can flex to support a large-scale regulatory review or provide a timely response to a particular regulatory challenge.

Using this range of delivery models and consultants, we are able to deliver tailored, high-value solutions in a cost-sensitive way, often at a fixed price. Our clients appreciate the savings to be made from instructing a combined legal and consulting solution and integrating the legal advice into the consulting process.
